

Continued from page 21

Hotel: New Day, thru Saturday.

Mister Kelly's, 1028 N. Rush St.: Erroll Garner opens Monday for two weeks.

Mother's, 26 W. Division St.: End Game, rock group, opens Tuesday for six nights.

Otto's, 2024 N. Halsted St.: Odetta opens Wednesday for five nights, with Sam Leopold as second act.

Pierre's, Holiday Inn-Lake Shore, 644 N. Lake Shore Dr.: The Dandys, thru March 1.

Playboy Club, 919 N. Michigan Av.: Sonny King, singing comic, and Zia, belly dancer, thru March 1.

Quiet Knight, 953 W. Belmont Av.: Kinky Friedman, Wednesday thru Sunday, with Corky Siegel as second act.

Wild Onion, Hyatt Regency Chicago: The Commonwealth, Tuesdays thru Saturdays until March 1.

Wise Fools Pub, 2270 N. Lincoln Av.: Otis Rush, Wednesday thru Saturday, Dave Remington's bands on Mondays, Forefront, Tuesdays.

Yellow Unicorn, 868 N. State St.: Brian Gill, Friday and Saturday.

Yorkshire Room, Park Lane Hotel: Jeanne Lambert, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday.

CLUBS/Suburban

Allgauer's, Northbrook: On Stage Majority, thru March 1.

Amazingrace, Evanston: Randy Newman and Ry Cooper, Wednesday and Thursday; Vassar Clements, Friday thru Sunday.

Blue Max, Hyatt Regency O'Hare: Barbi Benton, thru Saturday.

Brass Pail Lounge, Sheraton O'Hare Inn: Judy Storey and her trio thru Saturday.

Carson Inn, Nordic Hills, Itasca: The Wilderness, Fridays and Saturdays thru March 29.

Field's Restaurant, Oak Lawn: Dave Major and the Minors, Wednesday thru March 16.

Golden Eagle Lounge, Arlington Heights: Billy Pierce and the Odyssey, Tuesday thru Saturday until March 15.

Greenhouse Lounge, Palatine: Connie and Jerry K, Tuesday thru Saturday to May 3.

Iron Skillet, Algonquin: The Reformed Bootlegger Jazz Band, Thursdays only.

Mill Run Theater, Niles: Will reopen March 10 with Sammy Davis, Jr.

Coins

The 20-centers soar in value

By Roger Boye

TO A MERCHANT in the 1870s, the 20-cent piece was anything but the keepsake it is today.

After it first appeared in 1875, the coin was scorned because it looked almost like the quarter-dollar coin of that day. Merchants and the general public so complained about the similarity that the coin was discontinued by the U.S. Mint after 1878.

The 20-cent piece of 1875, for example, was only slightly smaller than the quarter-dollar coin of that year, had a plain edge rather than a quarter's reeded edge, and had the same obverse design of the Seated Liberty that appeared on the quarter.

Today, however, the 20-cent piece is a popular collector's item. Even the most common, the 1875-S [S for the San Francisco Mint], with a mintage of 1.2 million, sells for about $40 in good condition and more than $500 in uncirculated condition. [Compare the mintage figure to the 34.7 million quarters or the 3.7 billion cents minted in Philadelphia in 1973.]

The rarest 20-cent piece is the 1876-CC [CC for the Carson City, Nev., Mint]. Some 10,000 were minted, but most were believed to have been melted by the Mint. Fewer than 14 are known to exist today. Selling price for an authentic, uncirculated specimen would probably top $50,000.

The 20-cent piece is not the only extinct U.S. minor coin. The coinage act of 1792 authorized a copper half-cent which was minted until 1857. By the mid-19th century, this unpopular coin had been priced out of a job, the victim of inflation.

The most common half-cent pieces sell for at least $12 in good condition in most Chicago area coin shops.

The two-cent piece, first minted in 1964, proved popular with the public, but was discontinued nine years later because it was deemed an unnecessary denomination. A very good, common-date specimen of this coin, the first to carry the motto "In

Obverse of 1875 20-cent piece

God We Trust," sells for about $6.

Three-cent pieces were issued in two designs and compositions: a silver variety from 1851 until 1873, and the nickel variety from 1865 until 1889. The silver variety is more valuable today a common date selling for at least $8 in good condition.

Another extinct coin provided for in the 1792 law is the half-dime, minted from 1794 until 1873. This silver coin was valued at five cents, altho most collectors would happily pay at least $4 today for even a common date in good condition.

